purchased a zefhar from Zerrikania, reinforced with polished antelope horn, that she thought was a perfect bow. However, a year later, at the same stall, she found a rarer bow from the Far North. Measuring over five feet, and made of mahogany and whalebone, the bow generated fifty-five pounds of force from a twenty-four inch draw. The trader asked four hundred Novigradian crowns, and Milva did not haggle, trading her old bow back to him, along with a bunch of sable pelts, a small, exquisite elven medallion, and a coral cameo pendant on a string of river pearls.[1]
